Before the land we call Granville Island existed, this space was used by the three Host Nations, the xʷməθkwəy̓əm (Musqueam), Skwxwú7mesh (Squamish) and Səl̓ílwətaʔ/Selilwitulh (Tsleil-Waututh). Granville Island was originally two sandbars in the middle of San'aq (what we now call False Creek), it was an important location for these Nations, as it provided an abundant food supply; when the tide went out, the fish, seaweed, and shellfish would get trapped between the bars; the perfect local food source.

BC Live last hosted Pacific Contact on Granville Island in 2020, 25 years ago, and we are thrilled to be back in the cultural capital of Vancouver. We are committed to the work of reconciliation and decolonization, and to building relationships based on sharing and reciprocity with Indigenous communities. We are grateful for the opportunity to learn from Indigenous peoples and to work towards a future of shared understanding, mutual respect, and cultural revitalization.

Welcome to Pacific Contact 2025

bclive performance network

Hello Granville Island!

It's a thrill to bring our conference back to this cultural hub for the first time in 25 years. I have fond memories of attending events here as a theatre student in the '80s—and the energy is still alive.

Since Pacific Contact in Kelowna, our staff and board have been connecting with members across the province. We've heard your challenges, celebrated your successes, and gained valuable insights into how BC Live can better support you.

We're proud to continue our partnership with CARE, and this year, we launched a new grant for reconciliation tied to National Indigenous Peoples' Day—part of our shared journey toward the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's 94 Calls to Action.

From advocacy and funding programs to our directory, block booking, and the Illuminate series, we're advancing key priorities—thanks to the incredible work of our staff and Board of Directors.

Chairing BC Live remains a highlight of my 35 years in this industry. I'm grateful to serve, to learn from you all, and to keep growing together.

Welcome to Pacific Contact—connect, collaborate, and enjoy the ride!

Deborah Renz

Supported by the Province of British Columbia

On behalf of the BC Arts Council, welcome to Pacific Contact 2025!

It's great to see this year's gathering being held on Granville Island in Vancouver again after 25 years! The vibrant homelands of the xʷməθkwəy̓əm (Musqueam), Skwxwú7mesh (Squamish) and Se̓l̓ílwətaʔ/Selilwitulh (Tsleil-Waututh) are an exciting location for this live annual showcase.

Our thanks to the BC Live Performance Network for putting together this important event that allows connection and inspiration for over 300 presenters, artists and agents and more through over 40 Showcases.

Enjoy the event!

Dr. Sae-Hoon (Stan) Chung

Chair, BC Arts Council

On behalf of Premier David Eby and the Government of British Columbia, it's my pleasure to welcome everyone to Pacific Contact 2025 on beautiful Granville Island.

Events like Pacific Contact are vital to the health of our arts and culture sector. They spark new collaborations, help performers build careers, and connect communities through shared experiences. That's why we are proud to support Pacific Contact through the BC Arts Council.

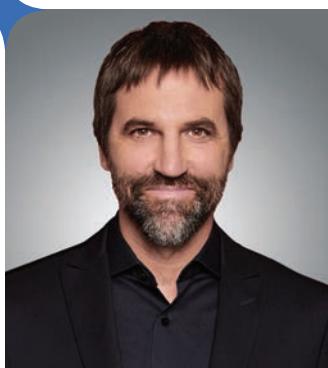

In British Columbia, we are privileged to have the highest number of working artists per capita than any other jurisdiction in Canada. We have also increased our investment in arts and culture over the past decade to support artists, arts and cultural activities and organizations. A strong arts and culture sector contributes to the economic and social prosperity of British Columbia, attracting visitors to our province and fostering investment in our communities.

Congratulations and thank you to the BC Live Performance Network, and to the presenters, artists, sponsors, and volunteers making Pacific Contact happen. Your presence continues to have a positive impact on our province's arts and culture sector, and I commend you for all you do to empower B.C.'s artists.

Sincerely,

Hon. Anne Kang
Minister of Tourism, Arts, Culture and Sport

Canada is defined by the unique voices and perspectives of its many talented artists.

They tell our stories, strengthen our identity and unite us across vast distances and diverse cultures.

For this talent to flourish, there is immense effort and hard work that goes on behind the scenes. That is what makes Pacific Contact such a critical resource for British Columbia's arts scene. Over four days, performers are able to make lasting connections with arts presenters, which opens the door for culture to shine.

As Minister of Canadian Identity and Culture and Minister responsible for Official Languages, I'm proud that our government supports this event. Thanks to everyone involved in this conference for your efforts in showcasing our dynamic performing arts.

ASKO

Sponsored by Mary Winspear Centre

Performing as part of the C.A.R.E. Circle Talk on Thursday, October 2 from 4:00 pm to 5:30 pm
at Performance Works

ASKO is a teaching lodge that you enter into with hesitation and humility. It is an immersive experience in which, if you bring an open heart and an open mind, you will learn to listen in a different register and come out of the lodge with a different perspective than you entered. ASKO is a coming together –a meeting of emotional and intellectual knowledge, a meeting of the heartbeat and the sound of thought travelling through space. It is a place that teaches us how to listen to the energies and forces that continually create nêhiyawak worlds in spite of and despite the noise of colonialism.

It is a storied meeting place of the drum and the rattle.

Marek Tyler is nêhiyaw and Scottish/Irish, and while his name is on the project, ASKO is a gathering place of many collaborators and advisors. In some ways, Tyler is an oskâpêwis, listening deeply to the creative forces of his relatives. He follows the guidance of his câpân (great-great-grandfather), his mom, artist, educator and Knowledge Keeper, Linda Young of Onion Lake Cree Nation, his uncle Dale Awasis and advisor Diana Steinhauer. ASKO's community doesn't end here, though. ASKO includes the kinetics of pow-wow dancers following the heartbeat of the big drum and embraces the choreography of prairie chickens telling the stories of the grasslands. It is the voice of the wind and the songs of the bright blue sky.

Taking this all inside, Tyler responds with ASKO, a creative offering in the form of a soundscape echoing nêhiyaw life and ways of living. ASKO foregrounds these energies, inviting the listener into a rich gathering of the nêhiyaw creative practice across time and space, generations, and forms of life.

Tyler is best known as a touring musician from Treaty 6 (SK/AB - Canada), the drummer from the Polaris short-listed and Juno nominated indy band, nêhiyawak. Their debut release, nipi (Arts and Crafts, 2018), is a thoughtful meditation on water. In some ways, ASKO is a deepening of nipi. One of Tyler's advisors, Dale Awasis, explains that ASKO derives from the nêhiyaw foundational principle 'askôtowin,' which reflects the following action: we are taught to lead by following and weaving our existence into the web of creation we are a part of.

This is different from how drummers usually work in rock bands. And herein lies Tyler's transformation from drummer to beat worker. By following the movements, sounds and rhythm of the nêhiyaw lives of his kin Tyler engages in wayfinding, inspiring and compelling us to make, feel and dream beyond our present moment.

ASKO is meant to move the listener emotionally, spiritually and physically. It is meant to cross cultures and travel. The album is electronic-forward and the lead singer is percussion. You can hear the sounds of waves, wind and wings in these tracks alongside repurposed sounds like the bell of a residential school. The album doesn't feel heavy though, it was born out of the kinetics of dance and it will make the listener want to move.

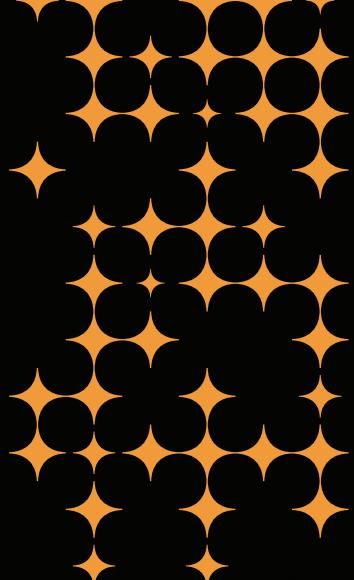

Tyler presents us with the sonics of a continuous rebirth, the poetics of a continual unfolding and enfolding.

The result is breath.

The result is simply a gift.

Welcome/ tawâw

Indigenous Performance by the Git Hayetsk Dancers

Sponsored by the Kay Meek Arts Centre

Performing on Friday, October 3 from 9:00 am to 9:30 am at Ocean ArtWorks on Granville Island, a stunning covered outdoor pavilion.

The Git Hayetsk Dancers are an internationally renowned dance group led in partnership by artist and carver Mike Dangeli (Nisga'a, Tsimshian, Tlingit, and Tsetsaut Nations) and Dr. Mique'l Dangeli (Tsimshian and Tlingit Nations), Assistant Professor of Indigenous Arts in the Department of Art History and Visual Studies at the University of Victoria.

Git Hayetsk means “people of the copper shield” in Sm’algyax, the language spoken by the Nisga'a, Tsimshian, and Gitxsan Nations. The copper shield is the highest form of ceremonial wealth shared among their people as well as other First Nations along the Northwest Coast. Their dancers are bonded by their connections to the Sm’algyax speaking peoples with distinction in their family ties to the many other Nations in Northern British Columbia, the Yukon, and Southeast Alaska. Since 1999, they have shared their songs and dances at ceremonial and public events in urban and rural communities through Canada, the US, and abroad including Austria, Malaysia, Germany, and Japan.

The Git Hayetsk Dancers challenge themselves to learn and practice the artistry of dance, song composition, choreography, and regalia-making to the standards of wealth, power, and prestige embodied by the copper shield. With deep love and respect for their communities, they draw their strengths together to give life to the songs and dances of their ancestors as well as bring to life new ones that reflect their experiences as First Nations people today.

Ample Man Danse

A piano is sleeping in the middle of nowhere. That would be the end of the story if it weren't for a musician accompanied by two dancers ready for just about anything. This light-hearted, poetic show plays with the possibilities in the meeting between two urban, contemporary dancers and a jazz pianist. The talented trio loves a challenge and constantly pushes itself to take its creativity to the next level. It's a joy to watch, and it immerses us in a world where music takes shape and movement becomes rhythm.

Holy Crow Arts – Keepers of the Salish Sea

Holy Crow Arts Society was founded by Justin Neal, a member of the Squamish Nation, for the creation and production of theatrical plays, community-engaged projects, creative collaboration projects and commissions, all with a particular focus on Indigenous and Coast Salish artistic expression and stories that seek to uplift contemporary society. Holy Crow was created out of a desire to address the dearth of contemporary and honest Indigenous characters on stage. They present unique, artistically challenging, and genre-defying work.

Keepers of the Salish Sea is about finding that path we all seek, a search for meaning in life, to discover answers to existential questions. A probing, searching, hilarious tale infusing Coast Salish traditions — inspired by a phenomenal cultural practice thousands of years old, nearly erased by colonization — with the pressing environmental and social issues of our day.

Company 605 – lossy

lossy is about an inability to take it all with us.

These are bodies at a loss, gathering together in a stream of movement. A state of recovery, seeking and sifting, grasping for an anchor. These are the bodies that were left behind, haunted by the ghostly traces of lost futures—a nostalgia for a world that never happened. It is at once real and science fiction, digital and embodied.

Lossy is a warped ritual of transcendence. It is a carefree conjuring of a shiny new future “us” and a collective grieving for what the future may no longer hold, once we finally arrive.

Oh Pray Tell

Oh Pray Tell is a boundary-pushing, multidisciplinary, queering trio made up of Shayna Jones, Sally Titasey, and Betty Supple. Melding roots music, R&B, and folk traditions with stomp-clap rhythms, cajon, upright bass, and banjo, they weave rich three-part harmonies with sass, humour, grief, tears and ruckus good times. Their performances go beyond the musical—blending spoken word, performance art, and experimental folklore to explore themes of justice, connection, and collective care. They center authenticity and communion, creating space for reflection, resistance, and nervous system-soothing presence. Every show is as much ritual as it is concert: bold storytelling, haunting harmonies, and the powerful use of silence draw audiences into an experience that is grounded, connective, and alive.

With joy and disruption in equal measure, Oh Pray Tell invites you into a shared space where art becomes both balm and spark.

El Balcón

El Balcón is a collective that composes and arranges as one. They came together in the culturally rich atmosphere of Montreal with a common love for traditional music from around the world and a desire to explore new possibilities in acoustic sound and groove.

As each of the six individuals learned and grew as musicians, so did the band evolve from being one that arranges traditional tunes to being one that composes innovative original music, whilst never losing the acoustic spirit of the traditional music that inspires them. Mexican folk instruments like the Jarana, Requinto and “La Tarima” (Polyrhythm foot board for traditional rhythmic dancing) blend with microtonal melodies of the east on the violin and oud.

Their heavily danceable yet unusual rhythms set the stage for the two voices of the lead singers that never sing a song the same twice.

Savage Society – Feast House

Savage Society was founded by N'lakapamux artist Kevin Loring for Indigenous artists to develop and produce their stories. Our focus is on developing work that reflects our worldview, sourcing traditional stories and cosmologies, and contemporary realities for public dissemination in professional and community settings.

In 2013, the research and community development project “Songs of the Land” began. A foundation of the organization and our work, each summer until a hiatus for the pandemic and fires, Savage Society produced this event in Lytton. The work employs a land-based dramaturgical approach to theatre; this process has led to the play’s enduring success and become a template for developing new work.

“Savage” carries a negative connotation in Western society, which has abhorred the natural state of the world, seeking to dominate and exploit it rather than live with it. We see Savage as humanity in its natural state, humanity in nature. Savages are angry that modern society is brutal and barbarous, attacking The People as we seek to live naturally. Savage Society seeks to attack ignorance and preconceived notions. In our natural state, we are equally human; we are all part of The Savage Society.

Les Productions du 10 avril – Albertine en cinq temps

Created in 1984, Michel Tremblay’s play Albertine en cinq temps features a 70-year-old woman who, on her first night in her new retirement home, rehashes memories from the different stages of her life. At 30 years old, Albertine already suspects that the immensity of the sky will never be able to contain her rage towards life...

With its story about a woman in search of freedom, struggling with her feelings and her relationship with a hostile and suffocating society that has always kept her in a cage, Albertine emerged as the obvious choice for the collective of women led by Nathalie Deschamps, director and producer. Albertine is the first opera in “joual” (French Québec dialect). Six singers and five musicians give life to the bewitching music by Catherine Major on the libretto by the Collectif de la Lune Rouge.

Deantha Edmunds

Deantha Edmunds is Canada's first Inuk professional classical singer. She was invested as a Member of the Order of Canada for her work, which seeks to empower Indigenous people and share their stories.

Deantha brings voice to stories of resilience, spirituality, and cultural reclamation. She performs original selections from her award-winning Indigenous classical album 'Connections,' as well as sacred pieces in Inuktitut from her album 'Pillorikput Inuit: Inuktitut Arias for All Seasons,' evoking the soundscape of Nunatsiavut over two centuries ago.

For this showcase performance at Pacific Contact 2025, the ensemble includes Deantha Edmunds (soprano/vocals), her 14-year-old daughter, treble Annabelle Edmunds-Ramsay, Yaletown String Quartet, and renowned throat singer Sylvia Cloutier. Touring configurations range from a duo to an ensemble of up to 8 artists.

This performance offers audiences an intimate window into Deantha's lived experience—how she walks through the world, and the ancestral voices she carries with her. The addition of a throat singer adds a haunting, visceral layer to the music, blending traditional Inuit vocal techniques with contemporary classical instrumentation. Not your typical dance band, Queer As Funk are part-advocates, part-funk revivalists, turning stages into dance floors and audiences into family for over a decade.

Born of a desire to bring funk and soul to Vancouver's queer community, Queer As Funk is dedicated to gathering and taking up space. The band has become a beacon in the 2SLGBTQI+ community, putting on high-energy live shows where diversity is celebrated and all are welcome.

Bringing fresh takes to beloved classics in funk, soul, and Motown, Queer As Funk's powerful vocals, tight horn arrangements, and irresistible rhythm section make each performance as groovy as it is fun. Their arrangements are creative, their vibe is pure celebration, and their love for each other is palpable, adding depth to the onstage dynamic that models the concept of chosen family.

Queer As Funk has played stages across Canada, including six sold-out headlining shows at Vancouver's legendary Commodore Ballroom. The group's individual members are consummate professionals in their own right, having collectively performed with artists Serena Ryder, Tegan and Sara, Dan Mangan, and Ken Boothe.

IN MEMORIAM

◆ Bruce Halliday

Bruce Halliday, who passed away in August, was a remarkable leader and a true pillar of the performing arts community. Bruce's lifelong dedication to the arts—from his early days as a lighting designer and production manager to his visionary leadership as the Port Theatre's General Manager and Director of Programming—has left an indelible mark on both artists and audiences. His passion for nurturing talent, guiding emerging artists, and creating innovative programming brought the "Spotlight Series" and countless performances to life with warmth and excellence. His mentorship, generosity, and unwavering commitment have inspired so many across the country. His legacy will live on in every stage he touched and in the hearts of the community he served so deeply.

◆ Frances Heinsheimer Wainwright

A distinguished figure in Canadian classical music, Frances Heinsheimer Wainwright, passed away on April 22, just a few days short of her 83rd birthday. She was celebrated for her career as a CBC Radio music producer in Montreal, and her transformative leadership at the Coast Recital Society in Sechelt, where she served as Artistic Director for 20 years. She was able to attract some of the greatest musical talent in the world to her small community. Her contributions to Canadian classical music, both on-air and in the concert hall, have left an enduring impact. Our sincere condolences to her family, friends and colleagues. She will be fondly remembered.

◆ Rick Scott

We remember and honour our colleague, friend and gifted musician, Rick Scott, who passed away in August. Just before his passing, BC Live's Chair, Deb Renz, had the privilege of presenting Rick with his Touring Award of Excellence—an honour so well deserved for his incredible talent, dedication, and impact on the music community and audiences across BC, Canada and beyond. Rick, who showcased at Pacific Contact solo, with Pied Pumkin, and in 2018 with Nico Rhodes ROOTS & Grooves, was more than a talented musician; he was a passionate storyteller whose performances moved audiences and inspired fellow artists alike. He left a lasting impression on everyone who had the pleasure of working with him.

◆ Ted Osbourne

Ted Osbourne, who passed away on May 16 in Oliver, was a high school English and drama teacher. He was a talented singer, guitar player, actor, and director. Ted volunteered for the Osoyoos & District Arts Council, where he was actively involved in their concert series and attended Pacific Contact for several years.
